Eddie The Eagle – Editing Task

Michael Edwards was born on the 5th December, 1963. He was a brave child, who threw himself enthusiastically into everything he did. However, at the age of 10, he hurt his knee whilst playing football. He needed to spend the next three years with his leg in a plaster cast.

At the age of 13, he decided to try a new sport – skiing. After joining his local dry ski-slope, he quickly became an accomplished downhill skier. A few years after learning, Edwards narrowly missed out on being selected to ski for Great Britain at the 1984 Winter Olympics.

Edwards was determined not to miss out on the next Olympic Games, so he relocated to Lake Placid in America to improve his chances. Whilst there, he decided to switch to ski jumping instead. He hoped that qualification would be easier, as there were no other British ski jumpers to compete against.

Edwards had many problems to overcome. First, was the lack of money. Edwards worked as a plasterer, babysitter, gardener and hotel chef to help fund his training and he even slept in a disused hospital to save money on accommodation. He also had to borrow a car, skis, a helmet and some boots. Second, was his weight. He was 20lbs heavier than the rest of the ski jumpers! The third problem was his poor eyesight. Edwards needed to wear glasses at all times. Whilst jumping, his glasses often fogged up so much that he couldn't see where he was going!

Through hard work and determination, Edwards finally qualified for the 1988 Calgary Winter Olympics, despite being ranked 55th in the world! In doing so, he became the first competitor to represent Great Britain in Olympic ski jumping.

During the Games, Edwards finished last in all three of his events. However, he did manage to break his own jump record and he survived without getting hurt. He also stole the hearts and imagination of the public, who affectionately nicknamed him Eddie the Eagle.
